WHAT NEXT?

With the discovery of the South Pole by Amunsden, it would seem that so far as the earth's surface is concerned the last discovery has been made.

Restless and ambitious man, striving always for the unattainable, has now apparently nothing left of discoveries to strive for. Since Columbus first set foot on the land of the western hemisphere, but little more than four hundred years ago, the two Americas have been "discovered" from Arctic sea to Make liquors brewed or liquors stilled Anarctic sea and throughout the length and breath thereof, man has traversed comparatively every foot. The supposedly impenetrable forests of Brazil have been pierced, the Amazon traversed from source to mouth, Asia and Africa have fallen under the dominion of man and nature has been driven back and forced to, one by one, give up her secret lands to man's per- On every hand we hear the cry. sistence.

What now, since the discovery of the South Pole, the one remaining point on the earth's surface, which was thought by Let's stop our pray'r, "Thy kingdom all except the few to be inaccessible?

Will man rest content or will his nature compel him to turn to other fields of discovery and look beyond the earth or underneath the earth's crust in the hope of discovering something

Man's nature will not allow him to be content with his achievements. It is the new and the supposedly impossible which always has and always will attract and call forth the energies of those who are born with the fever of conquest and For God and home go forth to fight

Perhaps this energy and this insistence for something new -this uncontrolable desire to go some place where no one else has ever been, this desire to do something which no one else has ever done, to see something no one else has ever seen, will find vent in the construction of greater telescopes, in more powerful guns, in larger balloons and with that patient persistency which must conquer in the end, sail off into space in search of other worlds to conquer.

The Phoenicians who first traversed the sea, as history records it, little dreamed that some day the intrepid Genoese Tuesday and probably would sail away for days and days out of sight of land and still colder Wednesday night hold to his course which led further yet into the unknown and winds trackless deep.

Little do the aeronauts and aviators of today with their marvelous journeys into space two miles above the earth's sur- Tuesday and Wednesday; somewhat face believe that some day there will come a more daring suitor of the air who will pass the present limit, sail on and on out of sight of "land", hold to his course until he reaches a strange land and a strange people not another hemisphere but another probably world—there may come just such a discoverer.

Impossible as that seems now it does not appear to be a more difficult achievement than did the voyage of Columbus before the directive power of the magnet was known.

Just what next man will attempt and after centuries of ceaseless effort, succeed in accomplishing, no one knows

We all know, however, that the discovery of the last point on the earth's surface will not satisfy man's ambition and subdue that persistent reaching out after the unattainable.

The next great explorer will be the man who ventures out into the unknown which still lies about us and discovers some thing to discover

Plan for Saving Lives of Deer Hunters

By E. W. WOODS

Evidently the writer who recommended red jackets for hunters has never been a hunter himself. It is well known that animals and birds have a much keener sight than human beings. Therefore if the hunter was forced to wear a jacket bright enough to be seen by other hunters how could be expect to bag any game?

Besides, if such were the case the careless hunter would get the habit of shooting everything that did not have a red jacket and the innocent woodsman would

The real cause of trouble is ignorance, regarding the proper handling of a gun. If careful practice in shooting were encouraged more the mortality would be greatly diminished.

The bunting license should be issued only to responsible persons who have had experience in handling guns.

The lives of our citizens are too valuable to risk in the hands of a lot of so-called hunters who know nothing of firearms.

The gentleman who suggested red jackets will doubtless agree with me that restriction of the license and not bright clothes will prove the solution of the hunting problem.

THE RECALL.

I regard it as hardly worth while to take your time in opposing arguments for the recall of judges or judicial decisions. To my mind both of these alike are unthinkable. The function of judges is not to pass laws: it is to interpret them, to maintain 63 to justice and right between man and man. The position of Denmark as a school for the study of scientific agriculture is becoming more important every year, and Dr. Egan has made a close study of the methods which have made Denmark a leader in cooperative agriculture, especially the effect of the plan on the cost of living. This feature will be considered at length by the lecturer in America. When questioned in regard to the Invitation to speak on this subject in the United States, Dr. Egan declared that such a request had been made He said that he believed that the success of the Danish farmers was not only due to their perfect co-operation but also to the fact that they receiveed the hearty support and sympathy of the national and provincial gov-
